Besides uploading files, your class lecturer may offer different types of assignment activities, such as online text or group submission. In that case you may have to consult with your class lecturer for the appropriate procedures to submit your assignments. Student submission is on the same screen as the course. You can submit one or several files and/or to type text essays also to submit a group work. A teacher can also choose to grade students assignments without knowing identities of those who submit the assignments. Assignments can have deadlines and cut off dates which can also be extended if necessary.

Assignment (Submission) types

Students can type directly into Infraplus, upload files or add media. The options are in the Submission types section.

- Online text: Text typed into the Atto editor is automatically saved and the teacher can set a Word limit which will display a warning if students exceed it.
- File submissions: Students can upload files of any type the lecturer specifies. The lecturer can specify the maximum number of files which may be uploaded and a maximum size for each file.

Students may be able to add a note (comment) to their teacher when they submit their work.
